European Union

The European Union is a political and economic union of member states located primarily in Europe. It was established in 1993 by the Maastricht Treaty, which replaced the European Communities. The EU's primary objectives are to ensure peace, stability, and economic growth in Europe, while promoting human rights, democracy, and the rule of law.

The EU is composed of 27 member states, each with its own national government. The Union is governed by a complex system of institutions, including the European Council, the European Commission, the Council of the European Union, and the European Parliament. The Court of Justice of the European Union is also a key institution.

The EU has a single currency, the Euro, which is used by 19 of its member states. The Eurozone is the area where the Euro is used as the official currency.

The EU has a common external trade policy and negotiates trade agreements on behalf of its member states. It also has a common visa policy and a common asylum policy. The EU is also a major player in international relations, particularly in the Middle East and Africa.
